NEWS FROM NEW-JERSEY.

JERSEY CITY.

THEY PREFER TO IGNORE THE COMPLAINT. The Police Commissioners have decided to pay no attention to the charges preferred by Frank O. Cole against Superintendent C. P. Smith on June 15. The complaint of Mr. Cole alleges that the superintendent was guilty of conduct unbecoming an officer and a gentleman. Mr. Cole made a speech in the Mayoralty contest last spring, in which he said that Smith was a creature of the "Ring" and had been made Superintendent for that reason. Smith caused the arrest of Mr. Cole for slander, and Justice O'Don-nell held him in $1,000 ball for the Grand Jury. This action was illegal, for in New-Jersey no one can be arrested for slander. Mr. Cole declares that when he was arrested Smith treated hi milke a dog and cursed him. Cole gave ball immediately and then directed ex-Judge Douglas to bring a suit for damages against Smith and Justice O'Donnell for false imprisonment. He also filed a complaint against the Superintendent. and it was this complaint that the Commissioners refused to entertain after the case had been adjourned a

Ex-Judge Douglas, when informed of the action of the Commissioners, said that he was surprised. He had received no notice that the Commissioners inhad received no notice that the Commissioners in-tended to act on the matter at their meeting. He said the other charges against Smith were that he im-prisoned James Garvey Hlegally, because he worked for Mayor Wanser at the polls, and also that Smith certified to the pay-rolls that contained the names of pollcomen who worked for the "King" ticket at the polls on election day, and who did not on that day work for the city. Ex-Judge Douglas will apply to the courts for redress for Mr. Cele.

ANOTHER BLOW TO THE BALLOT-BOX STUFFERS.

Judge Werts yesterday rendered his decision in regard to the application to release by habens corpus jeven ballot-box stuffers, who were sent to the penitentiary by Judge Lippincott. The argument was made a week ago. Judge Werts reviewed the argument yesterday, and refused to discharge the pris oners. Th points raised by the lawyers for the ballot-box stuffers were purely technical, and, Judge Werts decided, were not pertinent to the case. The seven ballot-box stuffers will serve out their full Justice Harlan, of the Supreme Court of the United States, was a guest of ex-Governor Bedle for a short time yesterday. While he was in the office of the ex-Governor, Chancellor McGill, Judge Werts and a number of prominent lawyers called on him and paid their respects.

OT HER SUBURBAN TOWNS.

NYACK.

DYNAMITE WORKS NOT IN FAVOR. Many of the leading citizens of Nyack met last night to protest against establishing the Clinton Dynamite Works at this place. S. R. Bradley presided. It was decided to secure all the signature from the citizens of the three Nyacks to a protest against the bringing of the industry to A committee of three was appointed for that purpose and instructed to circulate protest notices as widely as possible. At a meeting of citizens held some time ago in Upper Nyack it was decided to offer to reimburse Mr. Foss for all his expenditures in preparing the ground for his plant, making roads, etc with 6 per cent interest up to the day of payment. This meant an expenditure of $4,500 from the pockets of private citizens. Mr. Foss refused to consider the offer and has demanded $10,000. This proposition the citizens decline to accept, and last night it was resolved to renew the first proposition made to Mr. Fost. If he does not accept and thus thrown down gauntlet, it is quite certain that the people of all three villages will exhaust every legitimate means to prevent the establishing of the dynamite plant

Joseph Fuhrmann, thirty-five years old, superintendent of the estate of E. Bjerrum, two miles west of here, disappeared on June 27 and has not been seen since. He left the farm at 8 o'clock at night taking a lantern to guide him through some woods and intended, he said, to take a train from Nyack and go to visit his niece, the wife of a Newark rall-road conductor. He said he would be back next day, He did not leave the lantern where he said he would in Nyack, and it is feared he may have been murdered. The day before he diaspeared, he defended a young woman from the attacks of her father-in-law, and it is said that his life was threatened.

YONKERS.-Fred Coon, a well-known Chinese laun-Aryman of this city, was thrown from his wagon yes terday afternoon and severely injured. He was taken to St. John's Riverside Hospital, where he died within a few minutes. Coon and his clerk, Christopher Terrell, were out on a delivery trip. When the wagon turned from Gold-st. into Woodruff-ave. the horse took fright and ran away. One of the reins fell out of Mr. Coon's hand, and he leaned forward to recover it. At that moment the horse gave a jump, and Mr. Coon was thrown between the animal and the shaft, falling to the ground. The wheels of the wagon passed over his body. The horse continued to run until it reached Jevell's bakery, a block above, when it came into collision with a vegetable wagon driven by Mrs. John Lewis. Both wagons were overturned and Mrs. Lewis and Terrell were thrown to the ground. Neither of them was seriously hurt. Fred Coon had one of the largest saundries in Westchester County, employing about fifteen Chinamen and having several delivery wagons. He was thirty-six years old, and came to the United States eighteen years. to St. John's Riverside Hospital, where he died within

RESCUED BY VICE-COMMODORE PLANT.

Mortimer F. Plant, vice-commander of the Indian Harbor Yacht Club, the clubhouse of which is at Greenwich, Conn., made a rescue of seven persons when out in his fleet yacht Neilie on Friday evening. A man, his wife, four children, one an and their nurse, started in a flat-bottomed skiff from Portchester Harbor for Captain's Island, about three miles away. They went to see about making the Island their summer home. Upon the return voyage water got so rough that the management of Vice-Commander Plant saw the boat at a distance and ordered his pilot to put the helm hard-down and run over towards her. When within halling distance, as call for assistance came from the rowboat, and Mr. Plant gave up his pleasure sail and took the party on his own boat and landed them at Portchester harbor soon after dark.

And—
With the utmost tenderness he released himself from her clinging embrace, kissed her once, twice, thrice, ore madly but of the house, and with a look of iron firmness on his pale face he climbed aboard an express train a few minutes later and was gone.

PREPARED FOR THE EMERGENCY. From The Chicago Tribune.

Again and again the young nusband strained her his heaving breast and sought to soothe the agita-n that shook her frame.

"My word is pledged, dearest." · How came you to give them such a promise ?" she nsked, wildly.

"At the opening of the season," he replied, "I agreed to go wherever I was sent. I never expected to be sent to that place," he added, bliterly, "and made the promise without due reflection, but I am bound by it. I can't crawl out of it now, Lucinda."

"But if—I anything should happen to you, Sylvanus, what would become of me?"

"I am insured in three secret societies, denrest, for a large sum of money. My affairs are in good shape. I don't owe a cent to any son of a gun on earth. This house will be yours, and if the worst conies to the worst, you know, you can go back to your folks."

AN UNUSUALLY GREAT MORTALITY.

THE HOT WEATHER LARGELY INCREASES THE DEATH RATE.

The hot weather of the last week ha alarming effect on the mortality in New-York City, and the death rate is one of the highest ever known, except in weeks when there were epidemics. The total number of deaths reported to the Health Board for the week is 1,33d. Not since the week ended on April 18 last year, when there were 1,347 deaths. has the record been equalled, with one exception, ince 1872. In that year the week ended on July s, showed a mortality of 1,596. The exception was "grip week," ended January 11, 1800, when there were 1,424 deaths. The death rate for the past week was 38.00, and the week before it was 29.44.

The high death rate of the past week was due directly to the effects of the heat on the young children of the city. Diseases classed ge erally as summer complaint, killed altogether 400 persons last week, 438 of them being children under five years of age. Of the entire number of deaths, 660 were of claidren under one year old, and 802 were under tive years old. The week before, 485 were under one year and 640 under five years. The average of deaths of young children for this week in the last five years is 540 under one year, and 730 under five years. The average of deaths for the past five years is 1,183, against 1,336 last week.

There were eight deaths from substroke. auses of death were as follows: Measles, 23 carlet fever, e; dipatheria, 21, whooping cough, 16 scariet fever, s. sipatheria, 21, wheeling cooks to typhoid fever, s. malarial, 4; cerebro-spinal meningitis, 13; heart disease, 31; croup, 11; bronchilis, 23; pineumonial, 71, and phthisis, 104.

Last week there were reported at the Eurean of Contagious Diseases, 3 cases of typhoid, res scarlet, 275 measies, 64 diphtheria and

THE PROGRESS OF PASTEURISM.

HEROIC TREATMENT IN ITALY.

From The London Illustrated News.

What appears to me to be a very noteworthy step in connection with Pasteur's treatment of hydrophobia has been lately understanen in Italy. My readers are aware that Pasteur by using hypodermic injections of the spinal marrows of rabbits, containing the virus of rabois in varying degrees of strength, prevents the development of hydrophobia In man. He has had his non-successes—cela va sans fire—but only irrational opponents of his system demand that every case treated should be a success. When we reflect on the differences in the constitution of patients, in the lapse of time which may intervene between the late and the beginning of the treatment, and in the dearer of in jury they severally sistain to begin with, we clearly see that Pasteur's list of successes must be subject to conditions over which he has no confrol. This, at any rate, is true that the mortality from hydrophobia has been markedly reduced in those treated by Pasieur, compared with the death rate in cases left to ordinary treatment. Little Joseph Meister, forn and lacerated seven years ago by a rabid wolf, retains to day well and happy. He would be a bold man, I think, who would venture to affirm that, left to the chances of recovery under ordinary medication, this loy would not have died the most painful of deaths.

The treatment up to now has been preventive. Pasteur's artificully cultivated germs may be presumed to get to the nerve centres before the germs more died the most painful of deaths.

The treatment progresses. Now, on March 3 a young Italian was butten on the call of the left leg by a rabid wolf, which last are increased in intensity and strength as the institute of that name at Bologna by Professor Murri. This treatment began on March 3 a young Italian was butten on the call of the left leg by a rabid dog. He was treated by Pasteur's method at the institute of that name at Bologna by Professor Murri. This treatment began on March 7; but on March 29 the patient was in extremis, suffering from all t From The London Illustrated News.

dernier ressort. Dr. Murri injected the Pasteurian virus directly into a vein, and this modified treatment was continued practically till April 7. By April 10 the patient, previously at death's door, could get up, and from that date on to April 17 the last date recorded) his improvement was most satisfactory, his symptoms having disappeared, and his pervous system having almost recovered its normal functions.

Now, it may be too early, it is true, to be jubilant over the success of science in saving a human being from one of the most terrible of impending deaths, but it think we are jutified, at least, in presuming that the bold treatment of Professor Murri must have operated in a fashion appreciable enough to these who have studied the Pasteur method or germ science at large. The opponents of Pasteurism, who are not numerous—among scientific people I mean—but whose opposition fluds in repetition of already exploded ideas what it lacks in force, will, of course, be ready to assert that the patient here was made ill by the treatment he received at Dr. Murri's hands. This view is one which discounts and overlooks completely the fact of the patient's actual injury by a dog proved to have been rabid. I have read with great care the paper written by Dr. Hime on this case, and I think he establishes his conclusions that not only was this a case of actual cure of hydrophobia by the employment of Pasteur's method in a new fashion, but also that it is both certain the patient had developed the disease, and that the disease was due, not to the original treatment first pursued, but to the bite of the dog.

GEORGE WASHINGTON'S BAD KXAMPLE. From The Washington Pest.

Practical jokers never seem to three of playing jokes on George Washington, or rather Horatio Greenough's effigy of the father of an undutiful country, which stands goard before the Capitol. The public still remember the trick of some two years ago, by which George was converted into a cross-eyed caricature of himself, and the memory must evoke laughter at the same time with condemnation, for it certainly was the funniest statue ever seen.

same time with condensation, for it certainly was the funniest statue ever seen.

It will also be remembered that George sits with his right hand uplifted in reproving style, as if warning congress, not to make fools of themselves. Between the third and fourth finger of this hand some Fourth of July joker inserted the remains of a Roman candle, evidently with the idea of assisting the statue to join in the general joilification. The effect, however, was judicrous in the extreme, giving George the appearance of having just removed a giganite cigarette from his lips. During the Marine Band concert the other evening, a little boy, who had evidently been lectured on the evils of smoking, happened along. Giancing up at the statue he undged his mother and said; "There, ma, you needn't talk to me any more about cigarettes; George Washington smokes 'em."

THE COURTS.

PENNILESS AFTER MAKING A FORTUNE. A BUTCHER CHARGES HIS WIFE WITH APPRO

PRINTING ALL HIS PROPERTY. Andrew Kopke, a retired German butcher, tells strange tale in a suit which he has brought in the supreme Court against his wife, Sophie Kopke, to secure a judgment declaring that the property which Mrs. Kopfe holds is held in trust for her husband, the plaintiff. Kopke says that he is seventy one years old and that he is penniless through the machinations of his wife, although he has made a large fortune

In his complaint he says that he came to this country in 1842 and started in the butcher business in this city, where he remained until 1848. Then he went to California and stayed there until 1857. In that year he returned to this city, bringing with him a goodsized fortune which he had made as a butcher. Almos mmediately after his arrival in this city from the West, he sailed for Germany to visit his parents.

While on this visit he met his present wife, who was the daughter of an inn-keeper at Ottendorf. He married her there and brought her to this country. He had been so successful as a butcher before that he started in the same business again, and the Re bellion breaking out, he secured extensive Government contracts for supplying provisions for the soldiers this business he declares he made a fortune Wit his money he bought real estate in West Broadway and a house at Fifty-second-st, and Second ave., and nother at Fifty-third-st, and First-ave. He also bought a house in Jersey City for his son, Andrew. In 1886 he retired from business entirely, he says, and wishing to visit some of the places in the West which he had known earlier in life, he put $4,000 in his pocket and started out on a trip. California, the Sandwich Islands, Alaska and British America. After spending all the money which he had taken with him he returned home. Upon his arrival here he discovered that his son, too, had re tired from business and his wife was in possession of all his property and declared that he did not own any of it. She had already sold some of the property and had bought a house at Fourth ave, and Ninety, second st., where she was living. For this house she paid $31,000.

He now declares that his wife never made a cent in her life and the property all belongs to him. His wife declares that he does not own it and refuses to allow him to have it. The complaint was filed in the County Clerk's office yesterday. O. Curtiss Hofman is the plaintiif's lawyer.

LOTS OF TROUBLE OVER A "MYSTICAL WILL." Owing to the pecularity of the German law, or to he construction put on it by a German notary, the vidow and daughter of Solomon Beuthner are having a hard time in securing the money which Mr. Beuthner eft. He was a merchant in this city and was a part owner in a sait mine in Germany. He often went there to attend to business connected with the mine. While he was in Cologne, in 1882, he became This document was scaled and left in charge of Max Hillgers, a notary. Beuthner did not die at that time nowever, and returned to this country. He made a number of trips to Germany after that, but he never took the will and he did not make another one. He died in this city in 1889, and his widow, Martha, and daughter, Anna, have been trying ever since to get the will. so far they have not been successful. The notary declares that the will is known under the German law as a "mystical will." By the proistons of the law he also declares that the document can be unscaled only in open court in the presence of all the heirs. For this reason, he asserts that it suld impair his record as a judicial officer if he should open the will. Consequently he cannot even furnish a copy of the document to send to this counry so that the heirs can prove their claims to the state. He appears to be willing to come to this ountry, however, and has offered to bring the will here if he is allowed to take it back with him. Achere if he is allowed to take it back with him. Accondingly, Justice Lawrence, in the Supreme Court, Chambers, yesterday signed an order requiring the notary to appear before the court some time in August or September and to bring the will with him.

The order is made not mandatory because the notary has said that he was willing to come, for of course a Judge of the Supreme Court could not require a German official to come to this country unless he wished to do so.

THEY DEMAND THEIR SHARE OF THE ESTATE. Caroline Ogden McCogg died at Newport on February 1s. 1ss5, leaving an estate worth about $1,200, By its provisions the estate was to be divided equally between her five children, Caroline Ogden Jones, Frances Ogden Jones, William Ogden Jones, Mahlor orden Jones and Lewis Butler McCogg. Edwin R shelden and the two daughters of the testator were amed as the trustees and executors under the The son, William Orden Jones, died, leaving three children, William E. Jones, Alexander McK. Jones ander, have begun a suit in the Supreme Court to recover their interest in the fifth part of the estate, which was left to their father by their grandmother. The daulter refused to join this suit and the two sons made her a defendant in the suit. William is only fourte n years old now and yesterday Justice Lawrence, in the supreme Court. Chambers, appointed Fedward W. S. Johnstone guardian of William for the purpose of bringing this suit.

RISKING MUCH FOR AN EGG.

SOME UNHAPPY HOURS PASSED IN ROBBING A VULTURE'S NEST.

"I have my little 'fad,' as well as other people" aid a prosperous, fat and folly commission merchant o a "Tribune" reporter the other day, but I dare say on would guess a long time without hitting on it, so will copfess it without putting you to the trouble It is my collection of birds' eggs. It rests in my smoking room at home in its neat glass-covered boxes with cotten wool nests, and every egg-shell in it was collected by myself, and every one has the date and place of its capture marked on it. The making f that collection gave me many hours of rare sport, when I was an adventurous young fellow and had some of this load of fat to carry about, and the chief ise of it now is to recall pleasant memories of those lays that will never come again. When you're old you'll know how that is yoursolf"-and the old gentle nan took a strong pull at his cigar and let the smoke out in a long and noisy sigh.

"I was a traveller in those days for a big export house which was pushing into Mexico and South America for trade, and so it came about that most of ny eggs are those of birds of those countries. "Tell on about some of them?" Don't mind if I do. Well, or want of knowing which one to pick on. I'll tell you ow I came to capture the biggest, though not the arest, one in the collection. It is a vulture's egg. ce or twice while I was securing it that I would ever get out of Mexico again

"Vultures are shy of mankind, and their nests are exceedingly hard to find, and so when I met a hunter th) knew where one was, I hired him, with a couple f assistants, to show me it and help me get the eggs. We arrived at the spot about noon and I almost wished had not come. The guide pointed out to me a preipitous and beetling cliff, which looked to me to be bout five hundred feet high, overhanging a deep lake. About one hundred feet from the top of the cliff there was a rent or hole, which from where we stood, looked as if it had about as much room inside it as an empty our barrel. In there, the guide said, the vultures had their nest and the only way to reach it was to le me down from the top at the end of a long rope.

"It was a perilous descent, but making a sort of chair at the end of a strut rawhide rope. I swung myself over the cliff, and two men lowered me slowly down, while the third lay on his face and peered over into the abyss, watching me. When I got about twenty feet below the hole in the cliff, I signalled them to stop. The hole I found was as big around at the entrance as a barn-door; but the top of the cliff pro jected so that I hung fully twenty feet away from the face of the rock. Nothing daunted, I began to swing myself, slowly at first, and with gradually increasing force, till my body at last swung in against the face of the o'lff and finally into the hole liself. Catching projecting corner of rock, I gained my feet, and was nearly knocked off them again by the horrible stench which greeted me. "The floor of the hole was strewed with decayed flesh and fish and feathers and bones and in the middie of it all lay the nest, of long grass and as dirty as any pig-sty, and in it two young vultures and one unhatched egg. The egg was a grateful sight, but the youngsters were an unpleasant surprise, for they at once threw themselves on their backs and began to scream like mad. I secured the egg, but not without getting a couple of bad scratches from the sharp claws of the young birds which were about as big as hens. I was wrapping the egg in my cont and the young birds were filling the air with their clamor, when suddenly there was a whir of wings, the entrance was darkened, and I got a blow on the head that knocked me down in the unspeakable filth and filled my eyes with blood.

"The old birds were upon me. I recognized tha fact in an instant, and having nothing to defend myself with, I expected to be knocked down the cliff or at least have my eyes pecked out. I was always pretty ready of resource, and in this bad plight the thought fiashed through my mind that these usually timid birds were only fierce because they thought I wanted to harm their young. Quickly unrolling the egg from ny coat, I threw the garment over the squalling brats, and their sharp claws striking into the cloth, at once tangled them inextricably in it. Guarding my eyes from the old birds with one arm, I dragged the coat with the two young ones attached to it. to the mouth of the hole, only a step or two, and hurled them far out and down into the lake. "As I expected, the old vultures followed their

out and down into the lake.

"As I expected, the old vultures followed their young at once and their efforts to lift them out of the water were so ludicrous that I hughed loud. My laugh was quickly shut off, however, for in the next moment, as I thrust the egg into my bosom and gave the rownide came down from the top of the cliff with a run. Great scott! How was I to get back! What had those stupid fools at the top done! I did not know that they had watched me disappear into the hole, had seen the old vultures follow me and had then seen what they thought must be me, as they distinctly recognized my coat, come flying out again and fall into the lake, pursued by the two vultures, whom they could see pecking at me in the waves.

"They let go the rope and hurried away around and down to the lake's edge to rescue my mangled body from being entirely eaten up by the birds. After some tellous hours of climbing they found out their mistake and proceeded to climb back again. By this time it was growing dark and as I sat, hour after hour, in that foul hole, between heaven and earth, not knowing what had happened, you can imagine my feelings. Just ns I was in absolute despair, I saw a stone tied to a thin cord swing down in front of me. I clutched at it with easteay and nearly fell over the edge in my eagerness. Tring the end of my rope to the cord, I gave a pull and away it went up the cliff again. After due time I gave a pull on the rope and finding it taut, I swung myself out of that infernal hole and was drawn up to the top rejotoing.

"I have a great deal of sympathy with those so-called prudes who put petiticoats on statues that represent the humar form divine in puris naturalibus," said N. O. Holt at the Southern. "I am as great an admirer of art as a man can well be, but I can see no more reason for the public exhibition of a statue or picture representing a nude man or woman than for a like exhibition of the original. If the first is beautiful the latter is certainly more so, and as for the hackneyed French phrase, 'Evil to him who evil thinks,' it is certainly as applicable in the one case as in the other. Art is certainly divine, but modesty is even more so, and the former must win a signal victory over the inter before a young lady can make a tour of a modern art gallery with a mile companion with anything approaching equanimity. I cannot admit that the necessities of art require the subjugation of modesty. I do not go to the length of Anthony Comstock and kindred purists and pletists, but I do insist that art has abundant scope without dispensing with the fig leaves which our primal progenitors found necessary. All the lines of beauty in the human form can be made manifest without reducing the attire to a freekle and a tinger ring. In fact, I believe that a half-draped statue, disclosing the well-rounded arm, the neatly furned ankle and a suggestion of the swelling bosom, is fully as beautiful and far more attractive than one without any drapery at all." illustrated profusely and comically by Dan Beard and C. D. Glisson, two of the best pen-and-ink artists in New-York City. When first read, in New-York City, before the Yale College boys, it was received with one before the Yale College boys, it was received with one prolonged burst of laughter and applause, which lasted to the end. No doubt every admirer of "Our Chauscey" will be delighted to be able to passess it in a permanent and really be sutiful form, embellished by capital draws ings and enriched by the poet with a series of excruct-ating notes. It is a delicious piece of fus. and it is noreover thoroughly possessed of a spirit of genial and sincere admiration for its eloquent subject. Mr Bromley's humor, whether in prose or verse is too well known and too highly and generally aperciated to need special comment; but it is doubtful whether he has ever done his wit more credit than in these dashing, rollicking and brilliant verses.
